

HUNDREDS VOTES TO BE REAPED DURING WEEK

Presidential Booms Will Be Strengthened as Illinois and Nebraska Vote for Choice.

MANAGERS MAKE BUT LITTLE EFFORT

Opinion Is That Pivotal
Polling Will Not Come
Until Ohio Goes to the Polls.

Washington, April 8.—(AP)—More than 100 delegates to each of the national conventions in June will be selected this week, but the men directing the campaigns of a dozen or more presidential aspirants for the most part are looking ahead to states where the showdown on delegations will come later.

Ohio, Indiana and Massachusetts, together with a group of states in the south and west, are regarded as pivotal by republican leaders, who also attach much importance to the lineup, when convention balloting begins, of the huge uncommitted delegations from New York and Pennsylvania.

From the democratic standpoint, the May 1 primaries in California will afford the first out-and-out test of the vote-getting ability of Smith, Reed and Walsh. The three contenders, who were entered in the recent Wisconsin primaries but not on the same basis, also will fight it out in the Oregon primaries May 18.

Two states—Illinois and Nebraska—will hold primaries Tuesday, and then there will be a two weeks lapse before the voting in Ohio, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. The Indiana primaries, where Hoover is pitted against Senator Watson, are on May 3.

Only district delegates will be selected Tuesday in Illinois, where bomb and bullet, brought into play mostly as a result of hatreds over local political issues, have given the campaign a touch of actual warfare. Fifty delegates to each convention will be named, with eleven republican delegates at large and eight democrats, representing the entire state, to be selected at conventions later.

Hoover Out Ahead.
Hoover, who is out ahead in the number of delegates actually landed to date, is making no direct bid for Illinois delegates. Managers C. Lowden, a former governor of the state, are claiming at least 30 of the 50, predicting the only districts in which they will be bested are in Cook county, where "Big Bill" Thompson, mayor of Chicago, who has been agitating for another term for Coolidge, is a power.

Smith supporters lay claim to most, if not all, of Illinois' 61 convention votes.

In Nebraska, former Senator Hitchcock is entered in the democratic primary and is conceded the "favorite son" support of the state's 10 delegates. In the republican primary there are two states of delegates, one of them pledged to Senator Norris, of that state, who last week gained 10 uncommitted delegates from Wisconsin.

During the week delegates to the Kansas City convention also will be selected in Rhode Island, Idaho, North Carolina and New Mexico. Friends of Senator Borah are planning to

AFTER FULL WEEK OF FAIR WEATHER, GERMANS HESITATE

Baldern Aldrome, Irish Free State, April 8.—(AP)—The German plane Bremen will not start on its transatlantic flight tomorrow morning, said Baldern Aldrome, director of the Associated Press tonight. A week of fine local weather ended this evening in rain and increased wind, making conditions for the take-off of the heavy plane highly unfavorable.

Crowds of Easter visitors came to the field today from Dublin and were given a chance to view the Bremen from a safe distance.

Selection of Jury Is Battle Ground In Sinclair Trial

Oil Lease Bribery Defense Will Contest Right of Judge To Put Questions to Jury.

BRIBE OR PAYMENT FOR LAND IS POINT

Oil Baron Believes Story Told by Fall Will Help To Clear Him of Conspiracy.

Washington, April 8.—(AP)—With prospects of a legal skirmish to determine the method of selecting a jury, Harry F. Sinclair, wealthy oil operator, will go on trial for the second time tomorrow in the District of Columbia supreme court on a charge of conspiring to defraud the government in the Teapot Dome oil lease.

The opening controversy will be over whether the court shall follow a rule adopted last January of questioning the veniremen or whether counsel will be permitted to do the questioning.

Justice Jennings Bailey, who will preside, was expected to follow the rule recently adopted and use the Texas plan of selecting the jury members by questioning them himself. Under this rule any question which counsel for either side wishes to put must be asked through the court.

The defense will oppose this method, George P. Hoover, counsel for Sinclair, said today, and will insist upon questioning the veniremen. If, however, Justice Bailey rules against the defense, an exception will be noted and the work of choosing the jury will go ahead under the court's wishes.

Chief Question in Case.
Plans of the defense and prosecution have indicated that the chief question the jury will have to decide will be whether the $233,000 in Liberty bonds, which Sinclair will admit he gave Fall, were for a legitimate one-third interest in the New Mexico ranch of the former cabinet officer, as contended by the oil man and Fall, or whether it was a bribe for the oil man to help Sinclair win the Teapot Dome lease, as contended by the government.

Fall and his son-in-law, M. T. Everhart, have both said that the payment was for one-third interest in the Tres Ritos Cattle and Land company where Sinclair wished to breed range horses and establish a country club for men only.

It was learned that Sinclair will admit that he made a payment to Fall, but in bonds purchased by the Continental Trading company from profits of an oil deal. He will insist that the source of the bonds is immaterial to the charges against him and that this may prevent the government from getting into the formation of the Continental Trading company, which the interior secretary has been seeking to bring out.

Twenty-Six Are Called.
Of 26 persons called for the panel from which it is hoped to select the Sinclair jury, three are women, two of whom are married. Each of the panel has been investigated to determine community standing by both the defense and prosecution. Details of the veniremen's life history have been brought out.

Inasmuch as the first trial of Sinclair—then tried with Fall—ended in a mistrial because of the conduct of the jury by Burns detectives hired by Sinclair, it is expected that this jury will be locked up until a verdict is reached.

Sinclair has said he feels that the deposition given by Fall in El Paso recently, would aid him in his defense. The government has estimated that since Everhart has disclosed the source of the bonds Fall received that his testimony will shorten materially the time it will require the government to present its case. The prosecutors believe they will require not more than a week. The time necessary for the defense depends largely upon what government attack develops but counsel for Sinclair believe they can complete their evidence in three weeks.

Quiet Day for Ford.

Chicago Arrests Disclose Scheme To Extort Million From Wealthy Families of Country.

RESCUED VICTIM RELATES HORRORS

Eyes Taped and Forced To Stand Against Wall Expecting Shock of Bullet in Back.

Chicago, April 8.—(AP)—Confessions obtained by police today from three of the seven men arrested in connection with the kidnapping of Thomas Gaylor, wealthy automobile dealer and hotel owner, showed the gang had definite plans for abducting a score or more Chicagoans for ransoms totaling $1,000,000.

This information came from William (Big Bill) Lewis, identified by police as a gambler, former saloon keeper and the "go-between" in negotiations for Gaylor's ransom of $100,000.

Admissions from the three cleared not only the Gaylor case, authorities said, but several in Detroit.

Three more members of the ring are being sought, chief among them Harold Conliffe, gambler, believed to be the ringleader. The fugitives are of the singularly heavy build, dark hair, and carrying a supply of dynamite, police were told. Detectives searching for them are armed with machine guns.

Gaylor, captured last Sunday, was rescued by police in a small summer cottage at suburban Crystal Lake, 40 miles northwest of here yesterday. He told a gruesome tale of the horrors he suffered from blindness and constant threat of death.

Eyes Taped Shut.
At his home today, under the care of physicians and a police guard, he said: "This is as happy an Easter as anyone ever could wish for."

Gaylor appeared on the verge of a nervous collapse as he told his dramatic story to the police.

"I was driving home on Palm Sunday," he said, "Three men in an automobile crowded me to the curb, and they told me to get out of the car. I carried me away in their machine."

"They changed me to another car, and after a time taped my eyes shut and put a sack over my head."

"When found, my eyes still were taped shut and it was several minutes before I was able to see my rescuers."

Expected Assassination.
"We drove for hours before I felt the car leave the pavement and show down over muddy roads. When the wild ride ended, I was led into a building. The sack was removed and I was ordered to stand with my face against the wall."

NEW YORK PARADE REVEALS FASHION AT ITS PINNACLE

Feminine Eyes Feast on Small Felt Hats, Reptile Boots, Red Fox Furs and Ensemble Suits.

New York, April 8.—(AP)—Greeted by fair skies and sunshine, with a not too cooling breeze, New York and its guests went to church en masse then flocked to Fifth avenue for the annual Easter fashion parade.

The more famous houses of worship were unable to accommodate those who sought to attend services.

Madly's headgear and shoes showed the greatest novelty in the new spring fashions in feminine apparel, while the Beau Brummels noted that many masculine paraders had discarded the outworn trousers for short, tuxedo-length coats.

Shoulder flowers of real violets and sweet peas, often matched by a close fitting toque of the same blooms, definitely replaced the artificial shoulder ornaments of last spring.

Shoes were seen as not merely footgear, but creations in lizard and snakeskin, the most popular materials, were fashioned in slippers or oxfords, or used in ornamental designs on kid-skin shoes. Bags were generally of the same leather as the wearer's shoes.

Ensemble suits ruled the day, being the most popular color with a severe sprinkling of greys.

Fur did not appear on the collars of the newest coats, but was used in bracelet cuffs, some of which were so long they extended past the elbow. Fox scarfs were much in evidence.

Small Hat Hats Win.
Skirts are to be just as short and hats just as small as ever. Beige also holds its own, and beige and brown, especially in tweeds and homespuns, are undeniably smart.

The strictly tailored suit (feminine)—there was no doubt about it—has been fighting a losing battle since last Easter. Ensembles, as they are called, have supplanted the tailleur, as it was called.

Red fox hasn't done away with, but has at least become a noticeable competitor for silver fox and was used freely for coat trimming. Two small sets before the head of one blinding into the hindquarters of the other, are undeniably smart.

Small Hat Hats Win.
The reptile kingdom is also holding its own and reptile skins were crushed today by some of the smartest hats on New York. Practically all the smart shoes seemed to be of the same creeping, crawling thing or other and often the purses matched.

Smith's Carolina Visit Holds Politicians' Eyes

BOTH FACTIONS WATCH GOVERNOR IN SOUTH

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.
United News Staff Correspondent.
Washington, April 8.—Democratic politicians will keep their field glasses trained on the "good will vacation" which Governor Alfred E. Smith begins this week in Asheville, N. C. Some of them fear and others hope that considerable political effect will result from this friendly visit into the strong-hold of anti-Smith sentiment.

Governor Smith is not going into North Carolina as a politician chasing presidential delegates, but as the executive of a great state in search of a quiet, beautiful place in which to recuperate from a hard legislative session. He has announced that politics must be parked outside of the executive domicile.

But this does not preclude his visit from having its political effect. First, the indirect effect. North Carolina is one of the most wide-awake and progressive of southern states and is rapidly becoming industrialized. Chambers of commerce are as active in promotion of their respective communities as any in the middle west. Asheville is one of the most alert of these rapidly growing communities. Smith's visit will bring to Asheville and the state publicity worth thousands of dollars.

Simmons Is Hostile.
When to this selfish aspect is added the indirect hospitality and generosity of a southern community to strangers in its midst. It is readily seen that Smith has a reasonable prospect of winning much friendly sentiment and friendship is what he needs in the south more than delegates just now. If the right seeds are planted now the delegates will grow abundantly.

Hot house forcing methods have been tried with not much encouraging results. North Carolina leaders have been left cold by the avalanche of argument as to Smith's vote-getting qualities. Senator Simmons, the dominating factor in the state organization, is as hostile to Smith as any democrat in the party. Josephus Daniels, Wilson's secretary of navy, publisher of the influential state paper, the Tar Heel, and a leader of the south is Smith's biggest job. That is why the impending "good-will vacation" is important.

FLOODS RECEDE
OVER ARKANSAS
BUSIEST PERIOD
Stoppage of Rainfall Brings Gradual Lowering of Rivers; Motorists Marooned in Hotels.

Little Rock, Ark., April 8.—(AP)—Easter brought cool weather to Arkansas but no more rain to increase the danger of a serious flood which tonight gradually was passing.

Sent on a meteoric rise by heavy rains last week, the White river in its upper reaches tonight continued the fall begun late yesterday after it had passed flood stages at several points. The White and smaller streams already have overflowed bottom lands in some low sections.

The Arkansas river whose rise was not so rapid as that of the White still is climbing but at no point was it expected to reach flood stage.

The question foremost in the minds of river men was whether the White would reach the Mississippi before the latter stream reached its crest. If the White's flood waters get to the Mississippi before the latter stream's own rise, the flood danger along the White will have passed, but if the Mississippi rise reaches the point where the White empties into it first, backwater may cause damage along the smaller stream, river men say.

Trifling has been blocked at Cotton on the White river since yesterday because of suspension of a ferry and all hotels in the little town were filled with motorists waiting for a crossing.

WELCOME TO VISITORS.

Atlanta is host today to a large number of visitors from various sections of the United States incident to the unveiling of the statue of Robert E. Lee on Stone Mountain. Among the guests are governors, senators, members of the house, distinguished military men, including historic old organizations, and prominent Americans generally.

To one and all a cordial, whole-hearted welcome is extended. Atlanta's hospitality is proverbial. The heart of the city is big. The opportunities for entertainment, and for recreation are unsurpassed by any city in the south.

For shopping there is no city in the United States of its size that offers finer stores and shops and merchandise.

No city of its size has more or finer hotel facilities.

No city is more beautiful, especially at this season of the year.

While here the visitors should visit, if possible, the beautiful residence sections, see the flowers and the budding of a southern springtime.

Warm, hearty greetings!

BORROW AND BUILD!

Dr. Irving Fisher, professor of economics of Yale university, declares, and very correctly, that the expansion of commercial loans would lessen unemployment and stimulate business if induced by big programs of public works. It would especially lessen the orgy in stock speculations.

Quoting from his statement:

"Our foreign lending is useful. It stabilizes the markets of our best customers, still convalescing from the war. But foreign trade is only a tithe of our total commerce. If profits on the nine-tenths representing domestic business continue to dwindle, we shall have more shutdowns and unemployment, more idle equipment, more goods rotting than we can sell abroad, while Americans famish for goods they cannot buy."

"In this situation a mere reduction in taxes will do much good. But bank credits issued to federal, state and local governments, if promptly enough, can help—just as they are helping convalescent Europe. In the past an intelligent expansion of bank loans for public purposes has served to push the wheels of industry over their 'dead center' and into rapid movement."

"That was the case after the depression of 1921. The proceeds of the added bond issues for public works increased the flow of wages, salaries and profits. The bonds themselves were used as security for bank loans by business interests whose goods had been taken off the market by the initial credit expansion, and the use of these secondary loans offset further deficiencies in demand and led to the prosperity of 1922."

This position is unanswerable. It comports to the position The Constitution has persistently taken. Nothing can so stimulate general prosperity as capitalizing the future by using credit resources and making necessary public improvements and expansions.

Atlanta today has a great unused bonding capacity, and there are many pressing needs for its obligation.

Think what great material welfare to every county would follow a completed through-state permanent road system!

YOUTHFUL BRILLIANCE.

Many men and women, approaching that period in life when they must look back and acknowledge that in standards of achievement and accumulation of money, at least, they have failed, may truthfully ascribe that failure to too great brilliance in youth.

Youth, of course, will not take warning from the experience of age, nevertheless the danger of too much brilliancy in youth is a very real one and one which should be posted as "dangerous" for future generations.

The brilliant child, clever at half a dozen studies, with native ability in four or five branches allowing leadership in classes and in competition with others of the same age, is in deadly danger of complacency, assuming that that brilliance will stay with them through life.

They overlook that achievement worth-while, for which the world is willing and glad to bestow the accolade of applause and the reward of wealth, comes only to brilliance made effective through training.

Too often the boy or girl who could, by native ability, easily excel in drawing, in writing, in music and in other lines, neglects to concentrate on any one and neglects to add the hard work of constant effort for betterment to the foundation of inborn genius.

Genius is now, as Carlyle said, the "capacity for taking infinite pains." It is, however, that capacity superimposed upon the native ability, gift of the gods.

The brilliant child faces an added danger, that of complacent satisfaction. Only by humble acknowledgment of its own limitations and the constant determination to perfect the rudimentary foundation of genius, can the youth overcome this added handicap in life.

FRENCH AMBASSADOR COMES.

On Tuesday, April 10, Atlanta will have as her guest the French ambassador to the United States, Paul Claudel. He comes as the special guest of the Atlanta Foreign Trade Club, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and the Alliance Francaise, following the invitation of the governor of Georgia and the mayor of Atlanta.

Every citizen will, of course, join in all possible courtesies to this distinguished visitor. He is not only a world statesman, but also has an international audience as an author. The Atlanta Foreign Trade Club has accentuated the position of Atlanta as an import and export city whose foreign trade is rapidly growing and the recognition of the growth of its foreign commerce has largely attracted the visit of Ambassador Claudel.

A part of the program is a business man's luncheon, sponsored by the three organizations to be held on the second floor of the Chamber of Commerce building, promptly at 12:30 tomorrow, at which the governor of Georgia will officially welcome the ambassador. A reception will be held for one-half hour preceding the luncheon on the second floor.

A cordial welcome to this guest is extended.

THAT WALL STREET ORGY.

The Manufacturers Record takes precisely the same view of the wild speculative orgy on the New York Stock exchange that The Constitution does. It says:

"The sheep and lambs who are 'gambling' in such lively way on Wall Street may expect soon to be relieved of all their wool and probably most of their hide. They are in a very dangerous position, for while 'gambling' they are gambling with all the cards against them. Whenever Wall Street is ready to unload, there will be a sad bleating of many sheep and lambs who are now gathering from all parts of this country and to some extent from all parts of Europe, for Europe as well as America is engaged in this wildest of the wild speculations that Wall Street has ever known. Billions of dollars will be wiped out over night whenever the turn comes, and then a collapse of the town for boom in Florida, the break of the tulip gamble in Holland many years ago and the Mississippi Bubble will all seem picaresque compared with what will happen to Wall Street. Perhaps those who have money enough to buy securities, put them away, and lock them up may be saved from disaster, but the fellows who are gambling on margins may some day look for a sudden turn."

It is remembered by thousands of American business men what happened when the wild speculative boom on Wall Street collapsed in the early part of 1907. Such speculative orgies are similar to the real estate orgy of three years ago in Florida. Everybody knows what happened upon its collapse. Legitimate business always pays the penalty.

Chicago's bombing outrages have averaged 300 a year. The dynamite has about as much kick as Mrs. O'Leary's cow.

As tainted money will be taboo in the coming national campaign it looks as if a democrat will be elected on his merits.

If any one wants to know what a "peach-bleom complexion" really stands for one should take a look at Georgia's peach orchards.

We feel certain that the $1,000 bills with Wilson's portrait engraved thereon will not be used by democrats as campaign souvenirs.

Probably Mr. Ford is in Europe to open up trade relations with Palestine.

The sustained flight of Stinson and Haideman sounds like an air filibuster.

Those Mexican bandits could profit more largely if they came over and operated in Wall Street.

Communist Dinner Jackets.

There is not a bathing suit in Russia, according to an American humorist, but according to the innumerable critics of the soviet state there are altogether too many dinner jackets, fur coats and jewels. Comments on luxurious dress among officials have found a storm center in Mme. Lunacharsky. She is being criticised openly for the display of jewelry at a recent banquet in Geneva which she had accompanied her husband. One of the keenest critics of Mme. Lunacharsky is Comrade Jaroslavsky. He writes in the Pravda that she is seeking to incarnate the spirit of bolshevism in a mannequin. He calls her a demagogic influence upon the communists. "Every magazine on earth," he complains, "has published portraits of this woman wearing rich frocks, innumerable necklaces, rings and other ornaments supposed to be beautiful. The capitalist press has calculated the value of these trappings and has made impertinent remarks about the soviet state and the communist party, neither of which is in any way responsible. Soviet officials abroad, it is said, further overdo themselves in attempting to behave in accordance with the customs of bourgeois states. 'In America, for instance,' writes the Pravda, 'where the governing class dresses quietly, our Russian comrades put on dinner jackets which fit them about as well as a saddle fits a cow.'"

Fascist Decalogue.

Here are the ten golden rules for the guidance of the 50,000 boys who become full-fledged fascists this month and get it free: (1) Be it known that the true fascist, particularly the militiaman, must not believe in perpetual peace. (2) That terms of imprisonment are always merited. (3) That one's country is served even when guarding a can of gasoline. (4) Your companion-at-arms must be a brother, because he lives with you and thinks as you do. (5) Rifle and equipment are not given to you to spoil, but to keep in order and readiness for war. (6) Never say "After all, the government pays for it." (7) You are not a soldier, but only chaos and defeat. (8) Mussolini is always right. (9) Insobriety can lead to mitigation for the volunteer. (10) What, above all else, should be most dear to you? The life of the Duce.

Winged Witness.

A shoe merchant of Paris, named Leroux, started action for divorce on the ground of cruelty. He said his wife constantly beat him up and that her bellicose character had already manifested itself on the honeymoon, but that he had borne it because he was in the hope that the lady would improve in time. No improvement had occurred, however. The shoe merchant's story moved the judges considerably and they felt inclined to grant him his divorce, when the "avocat general" asked for proofs. Now most of the hearing had taken place in the strictest privacy. The husband, afraid that he would lose his case, suddenly had a bright idea. He came as witness to the court and said: "The canary lived in his winged bed. This songster had the merit to love his master. 'Whenever my wife beats me,' said the shoe merchant, 'the canary beats his wings as if he wanted to come to my aid.' The judges ordered the bird brought to court. And then the wife of the plaintiff was overheard to say that she raised the bird, obligingly lent her for the moment by one of the judges, when the canary became extremely excited, he screamed, beat his wings against the bars of his cage. The bird's testimony made a profound impression. The woman, moved to tears, confessed her maltreatment and the judges granted the decree of separation.

Odds & Ends of City Life

BY BILL SHIPPEN

Taxi drivers here are comparatively immune from stick-up artists. That is, fewer of them relate wolfish tales to police than do those of other cities.

Up east thieves and would-be bandits shake them down as a sort of preliminary course in the gentle art of persuasion.

And speaking of taxi drivers, the way those boys dive into fender-grazing opportunities of traffic seems suicidal at first glance. Yet 12 hours daily behind the wheel enables them to do things few drivers could emulate without getting a windshield folded about their ears.

After a year of signing all the taxi meter slips my boss will stand, I am convinced, as solid as the back of a town is as safe as slower and more stately transportation methods.

Those who have had opportunity to become acquainted with the Blue Ridge mountaineer must have noticed how loathe are the women to venture an opinion among strangers.

They almost invariably are content to let the men do the talking, remaining in the background ready to serve the needs of their words and masters, listening respectfully to the conversation, but contributing nothing.

Yet a woman of Rabun county the other day, while waiting on the table where the masculine contingent discussed food and general topics, made this comment on grand opera: "I don't guess I could understand music like that—I was raised up here in the hills where we don't have many ears."

"But I like to hear the branches comin' down the mountains, and sometimes the wind is right pretty when it blows through the trees back of the spring—the birds are nice, too, especially in the spring of the year."

No, we don't have much music up here in the mountains, but I don't guess I could stand it anywhere else."

Just in Passing

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON.

One of the books of the week that I have read with more than passing interest, entertainment and pleasure is entitled "C. W. Long," by Francis Long Taylor, of Athens.

It has just been published by Paul B. Hoeber (Inc.), of New York, and the foreword is by Dr. Francis R. Packard.

It is particularly timely at this moment on account of the campaign for funds to build a monument to Dr. Crawford Long, by reason of his great work in the introduction of anesthesia in the performance of surgical operations.

Of course, Georgia knows Dr. Long, and appreciates his great work for humanity as no other state, and one of its two figures in Statuary hall in Washington is that of this distinguished man.

And yet, because of dissent and controversy there has been a doubt in this country as to whether or not Dr. Crawford Long was the real discoverer of anesthetics. I can say, "Yes," he was, and anybody who tries to take that distinction from him is only a blundering fool.

This book (entitled "C. W. Long") has been written with the aim of presenting an absolutely truthful account of the life and work of Dr. Crawford Long, and with the determination that if the writer discovered that he inadvertently any error had been made, it would be corrected.

It has been stated that Dr. Long was a charter member of the Georgia Medical Association, known as the Georgia State Medical Society, organized March 20, 1849. That this was a reasonable supposition may be judged from the contents of a letter from the secretary of the body, Dr. Charles Quintard, dated January 4, 1850, which proves that Dr. Long was in perfect accord with the organization.

Upon investigation the author finds that on the first meeting no formal business was transacted except the passing of a resolution that the legislature be requested to pass a certain bill. The writer also finds that Dr. Long joined this society at a meeting in Savannah, April 1853, and at that occasion read a paper on his discovery of sulphuric ether as an anesthetic.

The fact is, Dr. Long was modest and retiring. What he did was in

W. W. Gaines, School Commissioner, Gives 16 Reasons for Junior Highs

To the Editor of The Atlanta Constitution: Will you please allow me to suggest some reasons why, in my opinion, the mayor's veto of the proposed referendum on junior high schools should be sustained?

1. There has been no movement by the people, either through petition, or by initiative under the charter, or by any means, to have the referendum to be held. On the other hand, there has been an insistent demand from the people for the enlargement of the present schools and the building of new junior high schools.

2. That junior high schools are in a popular vote to a vote of the people. It is no more a question for the people than the question as to whether or not the city should be operated, or how Georgia Tech or the University of Georgia should be conducted, or the Atlanta Medical college, or what sized water main should be run by the city. It is a professional and technical question, a question for experts, for educators.

11. The referendum proposed would be a hindrance to all. It would not be a legal referendum. It would merely be an expression of the people for what it is worth. It could be ignored or not according to the best judgment of the city fathers. It is a political campaign on a city subject.

12. The city of Atlanta should not be thrown into a campaign on this question. It would produce antagonism, it would divide the city, it would do no good but much harm; and would not legally decide anything. I think we should have a city-wide political campaign on a city subject.

13. Children remain in school much longer where there are junior high schools than where there are not. This is found to be true everywhere. The system is the best system which will longest and receive the best education. This has proved itself to be true in Atlanta. There are far more pupils from the seventh grade up now in Atlanta than there were before. This is a distinct advantage.

14. To delay the referendum would probably delay the building program. The school board has already expended a large sum of money in the erection of the new buildings. It would be a waste of money to delay the referendum.

15. We have already had a referendum on the question. The last bond issue was voted for the enlargement of our present school system. Junior high schools are included.

16. To abolish junior high schools would be to throw our entire system into havoc and irreparable confusion. Very truly yours, W. W. GAINES.

Health Talks BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

THE SICKLY NON-TUBERCULOSIS CHILD.

Let's have a little chat about the kind of child that gives parents a great deal of anxiety but does not, after all, have tuberculosis. I don't mean the regular kid that cultivates an obsession of "weak heart" under the namby-pamby control of indulgent parents or foolish grandmother or neurotic aunts; nor the pampered and spoiled child that just naturally learns, under discipline and overcare, to be very disagreeable and unamiable under the cloak of "nervousness." This youngster we're talking about is underweight, whatever that may be, and perhaps easily fatigued and without pep; he coughs more or less—though goodness knows too many smart kids learn to cough to mother's entire satisfaction. Some busybody, some crue husband, persuades mother to lay in a stock of thermometers and watch the child's temperature, and sure enough, he discovers that now and again it is several fractions of a degree above what the busybodies assure her is "normal."

Now, the poor child has had a severe bronchitis, or even pneumonia some time or other—a serious mistake for a child of overindulgent parents, for they are pretty sure to endow the child with "weak lungs" ever after. Or worse yet, some pattering old doctor has fireproofed his bridges by exhorting the father that the youngster is destined to develop tuberculosis.

Did you ever watch a cat stalking a bird? The cat creeps closer and closer and makes little furtive runs toward his prey, and flattens himself close to the ground. He keeps that old tail switching slowly behind him. What for? Is he trying to frighten the bird away? No, no. It is just instinct, evolution, the cat's ancestors have back had to keep the way clear behind him in case the prey happened to turn around and pounce on him for a quick getaway. That's precisely the way some of our most popular doctors handle the prognosis and diagnosis. They never make any mistakes.

When children in their teens behave as though they were going to have tuberculosis, the first thing to do is not to panic. The first thing to do is to get a real medical paper inspection—such as school medical inspectors make, but a real examination such as a good pediatrician makes, and very often it requires the highest skill and ability for the doctor to determine whether or not the child is tuberculous. Tuberculosis (skin) test is not unlikely to prove positive in children in their teens—that is, the test gives the characteristic livid reaction at the point of application; but this by no means indicates that the trouble is tuberculosis, for the most adults react positively to the skin tuberculin test, though only a few have active tuberculosis. But if the tuberculin skin test is negative, no reaction, that is a fairly reliable indication that the present trouble is not tuberculosis.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Rattlesnake Jake. I have had an inward goiter for six years. . . . Mr. Jake . . . known as Rattlesnake Jake . . . rattlesnake will cure it and offers to cure me for $100, in 10 treatments, 1 to pay $10 for each treatment. What do you think of this? (Mrs. B. R.) Answer—I think Barnum put it mildly.

Friend Has T. B. I have been in bed with tuberculosis. I visit her occasionally and stay about an hour. Am I running into danger? (M. H. J.) Answer—Unless you know how the disease may spread and conduct yourself accordingly, you do take some risk of contracting it, that is, if your friend is in the active stage. If your friend talks with you, the invisible mucus spray may possibly carry tubercle bacilli to a distance of not over five feet. Should she cough or sneeze without covering or masking nose and mouth, the spray may carry as far as 12 feet. If the patient is well cared for, or if she is intelligent and conscientious, there is practically no risk involved in your visits. Only children must be kept away from the close environment of the tuberculous patient. (Continued, 1928, by The Constitution.)

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

The Funny Drafting of Fess to Keynote for a Party of Discords

Washington, April 8.—(Special.) The choosing of Senator Fess, of Ohio, to be keynote of the Kansas City republican convention, has several interesting connections. He heads the list of Willis deLoach, a senator from Ohio, who was elected to the primary on the twenty-fourth instant. Should that ticket be elected he will be morally bound to voice, as a delegate at large, the expressed sentiment of the majority of Ohio republicans. In that case the majority will have reason to be gratified against Hoover and it would be unexpected that Fess, who is before voters for reelection to his senate seat for Coolidge, only a dash of cold water from Coolidge himself, rather spectacularly thrown into his face, tempered down the hot ardor of Fess to churn up an irresistible "draft Coolidge" stampede in the states ahead of both primaries and convention.

Some persons have tried to find sinister or selfish reasons for Fess' attitude toward a Coolidge impression, but there is no ground for those insinuations. The truth is that Senator Fess has not been seen or even yet any man on the map who he believes able to "save the party" next November but Coolidge. He is perfectly honest in that belief and for that faith I am pretty sure he will stand pat, hoping that eventually the convention will rally unanimously to Coolidge and break any deadlock that may threaten its peace and will to victory. But in any event, even in that cherished interest, Fess can be perfectly honest to say nothing in his keynote and do nothing in any other way to queer his chances of a renomination by the Ohio primary in August.

Who Could Analyze the Verdict? But suppose the friends of Mississippi river flood control are not satisfied with the bill in that behalf may be passed and raise the issue of "more and better relief" before their constituents; and the farm bloc members, their district and state, distribute it through their district; and the Boulder Dam friends and foes fan out their schemes in the affected seven states; and the big navy people make that an issue where there are navy yards and ship-building plants; and prohibition is made the determining issue in scores of contestable districts—and none of these are actual issues between the national parties, but they are all issues to analyze the returns and say definitely what governmental policy in general the people have mandated for the next congress and the next administration?

That question reveals how thoroughly national politics is shot to pieces and how surely we seem to be drifting into a new era of congressional blocs and irresponsible executive administration.

And that condition, now existing, affords a tremendously inviting opportunity for the democratic party to come to its senses and present to the thinking men and women of the nation a coherent and courageous program for the restoration of Jeffersonian principles of government, a program which the world has shown no better, sounder and safer.

Until you remove dull, "off-color" film that clouds them

Make free 10-day test to see

A FILM coat makes teeth lustreless and dull. That is what makes people think their teeth are naturally "off color." When you remove it the new way, teeth take on a brilliance that amazes. Gums grow firm and coral pink.

Here is a simple test that shows what the new way can do for you.

Stars of the stage and screen have made this test by scores. It has shown them a most important beauty aid.

This new way in tooth and gum care removes the dingy film that clouds your teeth. A film that absorbs discolorations.

Just run your tongue across your teeth. And you will feel that film. It is the great enemy of pretty teeth and healthy gums.

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It forms a breeding place for germs. And germs, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Ordinary brushing fails in successfully removing film. Under film are the clear, whiter teeth you envy.

Now modern science has perfected an effective film combatant called Pepsodent. It acts to curdle film, then removes it. It firms and protects gums; beautifies teeth quickly and correctly.

BOY BADLY HURT IN SAUSAGE MILL

Adairsville, Ga., April 8.—(Special.)—Costello Dean, 12-year-old boy, Saturday was injured severely when his clothing became entangled in the gasoline engine of a sausage machine in a meat market where he was assisting and was cut and badly bruised, as a result of which he lost an ear.

YOUR BOY AND YOUR GIRL

BY ARTHUR DEAN, SC. D.

Some day we must face the situation of rising costs of high school education.

It May Come.

Dear Mr. Johnson—In view of the contract made between you and the board of education—at the time of your son's entrance into the high school—that you would pay for that part of the cost of his education which was in excess of the amount necessary to educate a student who passed the required number of subjects each semester, I am today sending you a bill of $26.38 as the amount you owe this school district for this semester's work.

Respectfully yours,

THOMAS BROWN,

Secretary to Board.

"What's this? A bill for education my son? What does it mean? I rather guess not! We'll see about it."

And the father does. He discovers that the school board, estimating that it costs $502 to give his son the number of points required for graduation is charging him, as per agreement before the boy entered high school, a sum equivalent to the cost of instructing his boy, who has already used up $752 worth of education and has not yet graduated.

Will such an idea, as developed in a recent issue of "School Review," ever come? Yes, I think so, in this form or some other. No one in his right mind objects to high schools as such. But many are questioning whether high schools should continue to be the abiding place for those who want to keep out of the old cruel world as long as they can, who go to school because "it's the thing to do," who put all their bodies and most of their minds on athletics, sports, secret societies and general good times.

In many communities the public is not directly taxed for high schools. The cost is in the tax bill but not so one can see it. Apparently it costs the family nothing to send a child to high school—books are free and the only item of expense (a large one by the way) is for dances, tickets, clubs, dresses, fuzeloes, picture, auto. The cost of maintaining a public club—consisting of gymnasium, assembly hall, athletic field for exclusive use of some boys and girls to disport themselves as long as they can before participating in the agony of going to work—is becoming a very great burden to the community.

Everyone appreciates that the best is none too good for the willing, conscientious and accomplishing student. With this group we have no quarrel. They can have all the free education that the public purse can stand and then some.

Meanwhile we are doing right by the taxpayers or the pupils themselves to maintain social clubs for their own purposes in going to school is to get an education by getting in everything worthwhile which might give them an education. A few girls are paying in dollars out of their pockets for the cost of the points or credits on which their children failed might slip up to interest in a subject which is bound to face us soon.

DIET AND HEALTH

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Liver and Kidney Very Rich in Iron.

When there is need of increasing the iron in the diet, as in the case of the anemias, more of the glandular organs of animals, than the muscle meats, should be eaten, because it has been shown that glandular organs—kidney, heart, brain, liver, etc.—contain about twice as much iron as muscle meat.

Liver, as you know from my recent articles, contains some stimulating properties for blood regeneration, and it is being used very extensively now in treating pernicious anemia. The glandular organs are high also in vitamin A, but it is not believed to be the iron nor the vitamins which are responsible for the efficacy of liver in pernicious anemia. In fact, it is not yet known what principle is responsible.

Liver contains about as much iron as egg yolk, but beef kidney contains one and one-half to two times as much iron as egg yolk, according to the work of Forbes and Swift at the Pennsylvania State college.

Irritated Bladder.

Mrs. S.—The urine may be irritated from different causes. If it is too concentrated from the habit of too little water drinking, or if it is too acid, from an unbalanced diet, or if it has sugar in it, as in diabetes, and from infections of the urinary tract. If there is any reason which causes a retention in the bladder, these may be an ammoniacal decomposition, which is also very irritating. These urines may ultimately cause an inflammation of the bladder, and the factors bringing them on will cause other disturbances as well.

I suggest you go to a physician to have a complete examination and also a urinalysis.

Until you can see your physician you can flush your bladder very effectively by drinking liberal amounts of moderately warm water—a glassful every hour or so—and eating very little. If the urine is very acid and concentrated—if you are sure you haven't diabetes—go on an orange juice diet for a day or so, drinking a glassful of orange juice every two hours and a glass of moderately hot water between, so that you are getting a glassful of liquid every hour. Orange juice leaves an alkaline ash so that it lessens the acidity of the urine. (Urine is normally very slightly acid.)

Nicotine-Poor Tobacco.

Mr. R.—I haven't seen anything in our own literature regarding nicotine-free brands of tobacco, but in one of the German magazines I find an article by a Dr. Leonard, in which he states that he had examined several kinds of nicotine-poor tobacco, and that the methods of depriving the tobacco of its nicotine have been considerably improved. All he examined contained less than one per cent of nicotine.

According to the table published by the "American Druggist," tobacco varies from between one per cent and nine per cent in nicotine content, the average being probably three per cent. In general, the pipe tobacco contains the most.

Freeing tobacco of nicotine, however, does not free it of all its poisonous properties, for the burning of the tobacco produces substances which are often poisonous. (Mann.)

There is no doubt whatever that the use of tobacco is harmful, the harmfulness depending upon the susceptibility of the user and the amount used. The use of the nicotine-poor tobacco lessens the poisonous effects somewhat, but it will not break up the habit, and it is the habit which most people want to break after starting.

If you want more on the subject of tobacco, read Kellogg's "Tobaccoism, or How Tobacco Kills." We have an article on the Tobacco Habit and Cure, which you may have by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope and two cents in coin with request.

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column, in turn. Requests for articles must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed stamped envelope and two cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling. For the pamphlet on reducing and gaining, ten cents in coin with fully s. a. s. e. must be enclosed. Address: Dr. Peters in care of The Constitution.

A Difference in Tails.

'Tis just as well that it should be. That what suits you will not suit me. —Bobby Coon.

If there is anyone who is really clumsy, it is Prickly Porky. He shuffles along and doesn't know the meaning of the word hurry. Whether he is walking or climbing, he does it in a clumsy fashion. You see, he has a big body and short legs, and no one with a big body and short legs can be graceful. Prickly Porky is in this way, because he has never had occasion to run from danger. None of his family has had any occasion since way back in the days when the world was young. If they had had to run from danger often, they wouldn't have grown into such clumsy, slow-moving folk as all Prickly Porky's relatives are in the Green Frost.

"Did some one mention my name?" grunted Prickly Porky, as he came shuffling along where Bobby Coon and Boomer the Nighthawk were talking.

Bobby Coon chuckled, "I did," said he. "I told Boomer I was laughing to think how funny you would look with a long tail. And you would!"

"Of course, I would," replied Prickly Porky. "So would you. You've got quite a tail, but it isn't exactly what I should call a long tail. You certainly would look funny if you had a tail like that of Puma the Panther. And you would look equally funny if it were as short as that of Yowler the Bobcat. As it is, Bobby Coon, you have a very good-looking tail. But what earthly good such a tail as yours can be, I fail to understand."

Prickly Porky nodded in agreement. "Prickly Porky to do," it is his usual rule to disagree. "Yes," said he, "you're not a better looking tail than I have. But what good is it? I ask you. I would just as soon have no tail at all as to have one that was of no use. I've got a tail that com-

Old Man Coyote was approaching from behind and a little to one side. Nearer he crept, and nearer. He wanted to get near enough to slip a paw under Prickly Porky and toss him on his back. FLORIDA BANKERS FACE NEW TRIALS

Sanford, Fla., April 8.—(AP)—The special term of Seminole county circuit will reopen here tomorrow morning with Forrest Lake and A. R. Key, president and cashier, respectively, of the Seminole County bank which failed last August, scheduled to go on trial on charges arising from the bank's closing.

The special term at which Lake was convicted on one charge and acquitted by a directed verdict on another, adjourned recently because of the illness of Key, who the defense claimed was a material witness in the remaining cases.

Judge Dewitt T. Gray, of Jacksonville, who presided at the first trial last month, will preside when court opens tomorrow morning.

Sanford, Fla., April 8.—(AP)—The special term of Seminole county circuit will reopen here tomorrow morning with Forrest Lake and A. R. Key, president and cashier, respectively, of the Seminole County bank which failed last August, scheduled to go on trial on charges arising from the bank's closing.

The special term at which Lake was convicted on one charge and acquitted by a directed verdict on another, adjourned recently because of the illness of Key, who the defense claimed was a material witness in the remaining cases.

Judge Dewitt T. Gray, of Jacksonville, who presided at the first trial last month, will preside when court opens tomorrow morning.

Now, as he stood there, Prickly Porky was not showing his little spears to any extent. Old Man Coyote saw him and he saw that those many little spears in Prickly Porky's coat were not standing on end. In fact, Prickly Porky was a very harmless looking person. Old Man Coyote wondered if he could get near enough to try Buster Bear's trick of upsetting Prickly Porky and getting him on his back. If he could do this, he would have no trouble in killing of no use. I've got a tail that com-

Prickly Porky without getting any of those little spears fast in his own flesh. He stole nearer and nearer. He would take a step and then stop and watch. Then he would take another step. All the time he was careful not to rattle so much as a leaf; and all the time Prickly Porky acted just as if he knew nothing at all about the approach of Old Man Coyote.

Old Man Coyote was approaching from behind and a little to one side. Nearer he crept, and nearer. He wanted to get near enough to slip a paw under Prickly Porky and toss him on his back. Bobby Coon was so excited that he forgot all about the discussion in regard to tails. Would Old Man Coyote get Prickly Porky after all?

Crackers Come From Behind To Beat Louisville, 2 to 1

Big Leaguers Face Barrier In Good Shape

Pitching Is Expected To Tell Tale in 1928 Flag Races.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Major league baseball clubs face the opening of another campaign in great physical condition. As the players wait at the barrier, two reasonable suppositions stand out: one in each league.

The New York Yankees, favored to repeat as champions of the American league, will have to fight for it. Last season New York swept to the championship, 19 games ahead of the nearest opposition. This season the world champions have given no convincing indications that they are better than they were in 1927, when the opposition has been strengthened.

The National league race, thrilling to the final moments last year, promises to be just as exciting in 1928. Pittsburgh, St. Louis, New York and Chicago have their supporters who confidently believe that they can win.

The Philadelphia Athletics, Washington Senators and Detroit Tigers are expected to stand in the way of a Yankee runaway race.

While the American league second division places have been conceded, without their approval, Cleveland, St. Louis and Boston, an arbitrary assignment of National league clubs to places in the also ran class provokes an argument.

Boston, with Hornsby at second base, believes the Braves will be hard to beat and Cincinnati fans see hopes for the Reds, with better pitching indicated. Brooklyn, well fortified with battery strength, has its hopes to a team that has undergone radical revision. The pace at the moment seems too fast for the Phillies.

Pitching will tell the tale in both leagues before the first game is fired. The heavy artillery of the Yankees must be silenced to get the American league champions out while bidders for the choice positions in the National league are counting on their moundmen placing them there.

FINLAY, GUNN BOW TO JONES AND BLACK, 7-5

BY WHITTIER CARY.

Phillips Finlay, of New York, who had the honor of leading the field the first day in the qualifying round of the American amateur championship at Minneapolis, who is one of the longest drivers now playing golf and who is spending his Easter vacation in Atlanta, got his first taste of the East Lake course Sunday morning.

When, paired with Wally Gunn, he went down before Bobby Jones and Charlie Black, 7 and 5, in a match that found Bobby shooting the best of golf he has exhibited this season.

Finlay, although badly off his usual game through lack of practice, gave a startling exhibition of driving, his tee shots on many occasions traveling well beyond Bobby's. He was rather erratic, however, and his lack of consistency hurt his score.

Bobby turned in a snappy 70, going out in 34. The American amateur champion was hitting the ball in something like his usual machine-like way. His drives, with the exception of a very few, were excellent in direction and his putting was good. The only department that showed a trifle tendency to be erratic was his iron play. His exhibition of the long iron was impressive but either his work last Sunday, when he turned in a blistering 64, or his performance Saturday when he accounted for a certain opponent in a 70, Watts was a trifle off.

Charlie Black was shooting in fine style as his 74 easily indicates. Had his putting touch been a little more sensitive he would have been in a 70. Watts was a trifle off.

Finlay, who is a student at Harvard, will be in Atlanta several days. There is some talk of a future match of the exhibition series in which Bobby and Watts will take part for the Olympic fund being played while he is here. It should be done he would take part.

Golfers Resume Qualifying Today

Pinehurst, N. C., April 8.—(P)—Bright spring weather today made it appear certain that the second qualifying round of the United States and South American golf championship would be played off tomorrow permitting match play to start with only one day's delay.

George Voigt, of Washington, and Eugene Homans, of Englewood, N. J., will start tomorrow on an even basis. They played different courses in 73 on Friday and yesterday had 30 each for nine holes when play was called off.

Match play in the tournament scheduled for tomorrow is now due to start Tuesday morning. The original schedule called for the round of match play each day but due to yesterday's delay because of rain the first and second rounds will be played Tuesday.

"Baby" Strib Meets Buchanan April 16

Waycross, Ga., April 8.—(Special).—Sammie Buchanan, Waycross high school scrapper, has been signed to meet Herbert "Baby" Stribling in Augusta on Monday, April 16. It was announced by Manager Pat Boynton today.

Buchanan already was booked to meet Pete Costello Jones, Ga., on the night of Friday, April 13, in LaGrange. Buchanan and Cole fought a draw recently in Augusta.

The Waycross battler is in prime condition, and is taking a serious season of preparation for the two approaching fights, both of which are regarded as important steps in his youthful fistic career.

WINK-EYE-ING SPORTS

BY DICK HAWKINS.

No Rest.

Even the most rabid of sports fans sometimes wish for a breathing spell, for a time when he can sit at home after work and not have to go to the phone and call The Constitution to ascertain just how badly Whooos college beat Whatties Aggies on the gridiron or what the margin of difference was between the score of Whatties and Whatchucallin in their 18-hole match.

But, alas, for those who seek this bit of respite the coming week offers anything but succor from the sorrow of chasing scores and pursuing results. The baseball mania that has gripped the public in its talons of mild depravity during the training season will develop into a suicidal affliction with the official opening of baseball throughout the land. But baseball alone does not hold all the interest for Atlanta sports fans.

Out at Grant field Saturday the flying feet of ten score athletes from 30 different colleges and universities of the nation will kick cinders into the eyes of incautious fans. The annual Tech relays will be held Saturday and the magnitude of these relays increases with each passing year.

Not only will the colleges and universities of Dixie participate but scores of athletes from north of the mythical line will be seen in action.

The method under which the Tech relays are run offers much incentive for visiting athletes though their schools may not be able to send full teams. The meet is not conducted under a system of point scoring. Each event carries its own championship and no question of team supremacy enters into the equation.

This is a particularly fine arrangement for the visitors who come from a great distance to compete. It is quite natural that the local colleges could pile up a huge total of points under the point system by entering men in every event to pick up second, third and fourth place credits. Under the Tech relay system each event carries its winner and that ends the matter. If a distance runner, for instance, wishes to come to the relays for one event and succeeds in winning that event, he gets as much honor as anyone else and his school gets as much mention as the school that enters a score of men and captures half that many places in different events.

Tales of a Wayside Tee

BY GRANTLAND RICE

It is at this budding sector of the golfing season, about the time of the robins and the bluebirds have started their choral chirping, that the golfer, unwilling to wait any longer, runs into the woods and digs out the grass which is still thin and wan, and peeks into the hole to see what is in it. This is the time and place to guard the grass which is still thin and wan, and peeks into the hole to see what is in it.

At this time of the year most golfers are still rusty from a long winter lay-off. They lack the confidence which comes later on. And when they come to a close-lying ball there is a tendency to tighten up and to lose most of the freedom which the swing should carry. The shots, where the ball can be arranged exactly as the player wants it, afford no great problem. They seem easier than the ones where one has slugged away at close lies.

I ran into Charlie Williams, one of the directing marshals of the Artists and Writers' Golf Ensemble. He had just been out tackling a round the day before. "It hit eighteen good shots," he said, "and I was pretty good, and then I was through."

"Slicing, hooking or topping," I asked. "Everything," he said. "The trouble was I was hitting the ball in the middle of the green, and I guess I kept trying to lift it."

This seems to be a pretty good attempt to do with a close-lying ball. When the ball is resting on a foundation of well matted grass and one can swing with a free and easy motion, it is a feeling that one must do something extra to get that ball into the hole. It is a mistaken feeling, of course, but it is a feeling that is usually full. If the stroke is played properly the loft of the club will do the job.

Attempting to lift it with the hands and wrists or digging for it with the right shoulder will either lead to a perfect top or a perfect smear. If one swings through with the club without digging or lifting, the close-lying shot is little different from the other, where an iron is used. This is the time and place to guard the grass which is still thin and wan, and peeks into the hole to see what is in it.

At this time of the year it is a mistake for the average golfer to try a brassie through the fairway, unless he happens to run into a well-kept hole through luck. The spoon or the mid-iron is the only implement under these conditions. They may not quite get you to the green, but they make the next shot simpler than close range, the place of reaching for a niblick and later taking a 7 or 8, with an easy 5 in sight. This is especially true with the niblick, to carry or any round iron is the only implement under these conditions. They may not quite get you to the green, but they make the next shot simpler than close range, the place of reaching for a niblick and later taking a 7 or 8, with an easy 5 in sight.

Most of the difficulty in handling a close lie is on the mental side. But as most of the difficulty in golf is on the mental side, there is nothing new in this statement. One must be careful in taking the slight risk, in playing the close-lying shot, and in letting that club do its own lifting. The two faults to watch are dipping the right shoulder and lifting the club with the hands and wrists, and as the mental side, there is nothing new in this statement. One must be careful in taking the slight risk, in playing the close-lying shot, and in letting that club do its own lifting.

But, above all, there must be a suppression of fear or despair in the soul as one peers at the close contact between ball and ground and the system begins trying itself into knots. This is a feeling that one must do something extra to get that ball into the hole. It is a mistaken feeling, of course, but it is a feeling that is usually full. If the stroke is played properly the loft of the club will do the job.

Moore, Cowboy Kid Meet Tonight

In what gives promise of being one of the best colored scraps staged here in some time, Richard Moore, Atlanta University boxer, will meet Cowboy Kid, a colored Elks' Rest tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Moore has been in training for this bout for some time and is in the best of shape, according to reports. He is pointing to a victory over the fast and clever Cowboy Kid, who will enter the ring ready for a battle. They are flyweights.

The semi-windup brings together Black Panther, of the first ward, and Aggie Thomas, of the fourth. Two four-rounders and a battle royal are other features of the night's program.

Speed Test Halted By Rough Beach

Daytona Beach, Fla., April 8.—(P)—Adverse beach conditions today again prevented Ray Keech from making an attempt to set a new world's speed record in the huge 30-cylindered triplex, owned by J. M. White, Philadelphia sportsman. Keech made two runs over the course at slow speed and afterward declared the beach so rough he could hardly control the big machine.

Andrews Farmed Out.

Mobile, Ala., April 8.—(P)—Paul Andrews, Birmingham semi-pro pitcher, who has been with the Mobile Southern association team all spring, was farmed out today to the Meridian, Miss., club of the Cotton States league. Andrews is a right hander. Horace Byrd, another semi-pro left-hander, was released outright.

Jones-Sauer Bout Promises To Be Thriller

Sauer Keen For Victory Over Atlanta Favorite Tuesday Night.

Another step in Pete Sauer's determined campaign to stage a comeback will be recorded at the Atlanta theater Tuesday night, when the German grappler mixes with Paul Jones in the one-hour semi-windup of a card featuring Jimmy London and Charley Hanson.

Little more than a year ago Sauer was one of the leading younger wrestlers in the world. Then he was going under the nom de plume of the "Masked Marvel" and he was a big drawing card throughout the country. Then he suffered a back injury that cramped his style. He was defeated and compelled to take off his mask. Then the doctors stepped in and told him that he must give up all forms of strenuous exercise.

Doctors Take Hand.

Sauer was almost heartbroken. Wrestling was more than a means of making a living with the young German. It was a sport, one that held him enthralled. He thrilled to the touch of the referee's hands, denoting another victory.

For a time he despaired and obeyed the doctors' orders. Then he determined that he would overcome all physical obstacles and come back. For more than six months he remained on the Pacific coast, basking in the hot sunshine, going through the monotony of exercises.

A few months ago Sauer resumed wrestling and much to his delight he found that he was even stronger and faster than before. One of his first victims on the coast was Dick Davis, who used to be the terror of the Atlanta mat. Then Pete started working his way east, and today he has the keen satisfaction of knowing that he has come back.

Jones, in the two years that he has been wrestling in Atlanta, has been beaten here only once. That defeat is not held against the youth. Jones is a professional wrestler, other than Ed Lewis, world's champion wrestling champion.

Exciting Match.

The two-hour show at the Atlanta theater promises to be one of the best that Matchmaker Contos has offered. The two-hour show at the Atlanta theater promises to be one of the best that Matchmaker Contos has offered.

BARNARD SEES BETTER RACE IN AMERICAN

Chicago, April 8.—(P)—E. S. Barnard, president of the American league, today predicted a better balanced pennant race in 1928 than the one which the American league has enjoyed in several years, upon his return from a tour of the training camps.

"I was impressed with the evidence of a more intelligent and responsible to the public and a disposition to cooperate in every way to make our championship games clean and free from the exhibition of the national game."

"In numerous personal conversations with both veterans and recruits, I was particularly gratified to find that the American league has enjoyed in several years, upon his return from a tour of the training camps."

WILL LONDOS BE ABLE TO DOWN HANSON?

That is the question being asked by mat fans of Atlanta. Both wrestlers are fast, clever and also very strong and will give fans here one of the best matches they have seen. Hanson, if you remember, was the bone crusher who offered any Atlanta $50 if said Atlanta could stay in the ring with him to minutes without being pinned to the mat. Several tried but failed. Hanson and Londos meet in the main match of the card to be staged at the Atlanta theater Tuesday night. Matchmaker Contos believes the fans will see the best match staged here in a long time.

will be paying his side during his trial on next Tuesday.

Holland says it is glad that he was finally captured, and that the trial was tried to make up his mind to resist to Montreuil and surrender. One time he went so far as to draw his money out of the bank with the intention of coming home, but before he could put his resolution into effect he got drunk and fell asleep. He found that he had been robbed of every cent he had.

The state will try to convict the accused man of first degree murder without a recommendation of mercy. He was shot three times, after he lay helpless on the ground and begged him not to be shot again. The homicide will also be charged with kidnapping. He was shot or so before the homicide said he was going to kill "Timmons before night."

Holland is a member of a prominent family and will be defended by three lawyers, all of whom are well known.

It is understood that he will enter a plea of self-defense. It probably will take most of Tuesday's session to set the trial jury. The trial of the case will probably last two or three days, it is believed here.

NEW HAMPSHIRE DAM THREATENS TWO VILLAGES

Mexico City, April 8.—(AP)—Military reports from the state of Michoacán say that 28 insurgents have been killed and 36 wounded and captured in an all-night battle at a cave near the town of Cuesta Del Moral in that state.

The insurgents are said to have hid out in the cave. The federal soldiers surrounded it, threw in bombs and burned fires at the entrance, finally smoking them out and killing them as they made their exit. After 28 had been killed, the remainder, all of whom were said to be wounded, surrendered.

Youthful Orators May Win Place in Spotlight of Fame

BY WILLIAM O. KEY,
Contest Editor.

Editor's Note:—For the purpose of aiding to the fullest extent the high school students in Georgia entered in the Fifth National Oratorical contest, being sponsored in this territory by The Atlanta Constitution, the contest editor will publish from time to time, articles bearing on the technique of various renowned orators. The first, presented below, has to do with perhaps the greatest of all the "original American" type—the Indian chief, Logan.

Those Georgia boys and girls who are preparing now for the newspaper finals in the fifth national oratorical contest which will be held in Atlanta April 27 and which will decide who among the various district champions in the state shall go to Raleigh, N. C., for the national semi-finals and later to Washington, possibly, for the national finals in May, should bear in mind that the gold awards and the free tour of Europe are not the only possibilities of reward for their efforts.

Of far greater potential value to the winner of the national semi-finals and the national finals is the publicity attendant upon his victory; and the chance that his declamation upon the subject of the United States constitution may be recognized by posterity and that his name be recalled among the worthy orators of the present era.

In many instances it was the orator, in different times, have won oratorical fame. The present opportunity before the high school student is not one merely of chance. The national oratorical contest was inaugurated for a special purpose. That purpose, in three phases, is as follows:

First, to increase interest in and respect for the basic principles of government as set forth by the constitution; second, to promote a better understanding between nations, and third, to stimulate scholastic enthusiasm for intellectual pursuits.

Conceived at the time it was the contest, intentionally or otherwise, constitutes a serious counteraction against the tendency on the part of numerous radical persons and organizations to assail the value or the righteousness of the constitution of the United States.

Read to Fame. This it will be seen that the student who participates in the contest and who is successful enough to attain to the national semi-finals or finals, does so much toward thwarting the purpose of the anti-constitutionalists. And inasmuch as all oratory is based on a foundation either laudatory or denigratory, exhortative or exhortative of a given subject, the student in this contest has it in his power to pave the way to oratorical fame.

Many orators of long-lived fame have sprung from single occasions. This is true of nearly all nations. And notwithstanding that oratory is an art in itself, it is the consensus of historians that it was, generally speaking, a lost art from the death of Cicero to the rise of Patrick Henry. Though there were several eminent orators during the intervening period, but at widely-separated intervals.

Even the American Indians had their orators; and the embryonic declaimer of the modern era would do well to turn to some of them for a lesson in the quiet, simple forestfulness of their delivery. Nowhere is to be found more dramatic power than in the grim, embittered and pathetic speech of Tuh-Gah-Jah Logan, tribal chieftain, who delivered the following superb utterance in the year 1774, on the murder of his family:

"I appeal to any white man to say if ever he entered Logan's cabin hungry, and he gave him not meat; if ever he came cold and naked, and he clothed him not. During the course of the last long and bloody war Logan remained idle in his camp, an advocate of peace. Such was my love for the whites that my countrymen pointed as I passed and said: 'Logan is the friend of the white man.'"

"I had often thought to have lived with you, but for the injuries of one man, the Colonial Captain, the last Spring, in cold blood, and unprovoked, murdered all the relations of Logan, not even sparing my women and children."

"There runs not a drop of my blood in the veins of any living creature. This called on me for revenge. I have sought it. I have killed many. I have fully glutted my vengeance. For my country, I rejoice at the promise of peace; but do not harbor a thought that mine is a joy of fear. Logan never felt fear. He will not turn on his heel to save his life. Who is there to mourn for Logan? Not one."

Utmost Simplicity. That is the simple talk of the Indian, Logan. It was a talk not of a national institution, but of a personal motive for a bloody vengeance; and yet it has been preserved through centuries—a striking example of the possibility of permanence to the declamations of entrants in the oratorical contest who will speak on the constitution of their country.

When the entrant goes over the words of Logan, he should be given the benefit of the advice of one of the judges in the contest in New York last year.

That judge, speaking of a contestant whom he designated as "Speaker A," made the following notation: "Vibrating; superlatives; slow in getting to subject—no proof." He rated that speaker, incidentally, at a percentage of 55, as against 85 for "Speaker B," of whom he noted: "Well written; definition of values. Puts it over, not merely declaims."

Therefore it is thought that the plain-spoken Logan may be extremely valuable to those students in Georgia building up their speeches—noticeably his brevity, his ordinary words, so placed that color and emotion sweep through them. In a few phrases, the Indian dramatically told of his love for the white man; of his secret wish, previously unrequited, to some day live among them; of the cruel massacre of his people—"not even sparing my women and children."

Perhaps the most moving sentence in his declamation is the simplest one: "There runs not a drop of my blood in the veins of any living creature."

SLIGHT DROP SEEN IN AUTO FATALITIES

Washington, April 8.—(AP)—Deaths from automobile accidents in 77 large cities of the United States declined more than 10 per cent during the four-week period ending March 24, as compared with the four weeks preceding, and registered lower than in any other month since March, 1926, the department of commerce announced today.

Total deaths for the four-week period were given as 413, as against 511 for the month ending February 25, and 440 for the four weeks ending March 26, 1927.

For the year ending March 24, an increase of three per cent in deaths from automobile mishaps was reported. The total for the 77 cities listed, as against 6,534 for the year closing March 26, 1927. This gives a recent rate, it was pointed out, amounting to 22.3 per 100,000 population as compared with an earlier rate of 21.6.

Atlanta's mortality from motor accidents was shown to have declined slightly during the year ending March 24, as compared with the year preceding, dropping from 69 to 64, or from 28.3 per 100,000 population to 25.8.

Five persons lost their lives in Atlanta accidents during the four weeks ending March 24, the report showed, this being the same number for the corresponding period of last year.

Miss Allen Weds Dr. Alsobrook At Easter Twilight Ceremony

A beautiful event of Easter Sunday was the marriage of Miss Agnes de Maris Allen and Dr. James Marion Alsobrook, which was solemnized at twilight at the home of the bride on Adams street, in Decatur, in the presence of the immediate families.

The house was decorated with palms, southern smilax, assension lilies and spring flowers. The altar was formed in front of the spacious fireplace, banked with palms and lilies and studded with cathedral candles in wrought-iron holders.

Rev. Edward Small, of the Decatur

Christian church, read the marriage ceremony by candle light.

Previous to the ceremony was a program of nuptial music, "Just a Song at Twilight" and "For Him," being rendered.

The bride was radiantly lovely in French blue lace, fashioned over, georgette with a becoming hat to match. She carried an old fashioned nosegay of valley lilies with a shower of the same blossoms.

Immediately after the ceremony a wedding supper was served. The dining room was lovely with yellow spring flowers and many white tapers. After a short wedding trip, Dr. and Mrs. Alsobrook will make their home at 212 Adams street, Decatur. The bride wore for a traveling costume a smart frock of navy blue georgette, with a close fitting meadowbrook hat and a blue coat.

Mrs. Alsobrook attended Brenau college and is a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Dr. Alsobrook, the son of Mrs. Ella D. Alsobrook, of 1543 Peachtree road, is a graduate of Atlanta-Southern Dental college and a member of Xi Psi Phi, of which organization he holds the office of president of state alumni. He is a prominent young dentist of Atlanta.

JUGGERNAUT

By Alice Campbell

SYNOPSIS

Esther Rowe, a young nurse, having accompanied an invalid from the United States to Cannes on the Riviera, is about to return to New York when she sees an advertisement in the paper for a nurse and doctor's assistant and she decides to apply for the job in order to spend a little time in Cannes.

While waiting for an answer to her application to Dr. Sartorius, Esther awaits her letter at the fashionable Restaurant des Ambassadeurs. She becomes interested in the conversation of a beautiful French woman and her escort, an Englishman, who sit at the next table. On returning to her hotel Esther finds a note from the doctor asking her to report in the morning.

The beautiful French woman of the restaurant comes to see Dr. Sartorius and Esther learns that she is Lady Clifford. A few days later her husband, Sir Charles Clifford, is stricken with typhoid fever and Dr. Sartorius gives up his practice and laboratory work to devote himself exclusively to Sir Charles. Esther is taken on the case as day nurse. Roger Clifford, Sir Charles' only son, arrives in Cannes. Sir Charles tells his son that he has changed his will to the extent of making him executor and trustee of the whole estate. Roger is attracted to Esther and invites her to dine and dance with him. They go to one of the fashionable restaurants in Cannes.

On returning to the house Roger comes upon his stepmother in the darkened drawing room with Arthur Holiday, who has been paying Lady Clifford some attention. Roger orders Holiday to leave the house.

The next day Sir Charles breaks the news to his wife that he has named his son executor of his estate in his will. Lady Clifford dies in a rage. Shortly afterward Roger complains of a headache, and his aunt, Miss Clifford, offers him one of her remedies. In trying to open the bottle Roger breaks it and cuts his hand. Esther is called in to bind up his hand and she mistakes the doctor's hypodermic needle, which he has just used on Sir Charles. The doctor is unwarrantably angry with her over this carelessness. Two days later Sir Charles dies. Esther finds the needle, but instead of returning it to the doctor she has it analyzed. Lady Clifford dismisses her, but before she leaves she gets the report from the chemist that the hypodermic needle contained typhoid germs. As she is about to warn Roger she is attacked by a man who claims to be a friend of the doctor's. She escapes to the Villa Firenze with her suitcase and she is obliged to leave Roger's house. Esther manages to escape from the house through the skylight.

INSTALLMENT LXI.

AN UNBEARABLE MEMORY.

What if Theresa had had another and more vital reason than he had thought of for keeping him away? Was it possible she had been afraid to have him in the house? It was a fact that he alone knew her relations with Holiday, he alone had always, to an annoying extent, seen through her.

A smothered scream from the bed caused Roger to start up. Esther had suddenly sat up in bed, bolt upright, her eyes glazed with terror, one thin hand clapped over her open mouth.

"Esther, my dear! What is it?" She swallowed twice, then spoke, her voice still strangely hoarse.

"It was the doctor. He was outside there, in the passage. I know he was there."

"Nonsense, there's no one about, or if there is, it's only Chalmers."

"Listen, though!"

Roger obeyed again, and for several seconds they both held their breath, straining their ears. At last from outside there came the very faint creak of a footstep, as though some one who had been standing still was now moving away. Roger made a movement to jump up, but in a panic she pulled him back.

"No, no, don't leave me!"

"Certainly not, if you don't want me to. But you're quite safe now, you have nothing to be afraid of."

She leaned closer to him, trembling.

"No," the hoarse voice whispered, "that's not true. I'm not safe, as long as I'm in the same house with him. He is afraid of me. He wants to keep me from talking. He will do anything to keep me quiet, anything. He's only waiting for his chance."

"Esther, dear," Roger said soothingly, "you must keep quiet and trust to me. Remember, your nerves are bound to be upset after all that morphia you have had. You know that."

"Morphia," she repeated to herself, "yes, I suppose that is what it was. No wonder I feel queer. . . . And then of course I haven't had anything to eat for two days and a half, that makes it worse."

"Two days and a half!"

He stared at her aghast. This last speech of hers sounded amazingly rational. He burned to question her, yet dared not attempt it.

"The doctor said you were to have something if you waked up," he said quietly, as though there were nothing out of the way. "There's something here ready in a little saucepan, I've only got to heat it up. Shall I give it to you?"

She nodded and lay motionless, watching with languid eyes the blue flame of the spirit lamp as he made ready the cup of broth, then submitted with the docility of a child while he put another pillow under her head and fed her with the hot liquid, a spoonful at a time, slowly, for fear of making her sick. When she had finished she sank back with closed eyes.

"That was good," she murmured, "I needed that. . . . It's a long time to go without food, you get so weak."

He could hear the suspense no longer. Incuriously he asked:

"My dear, how was it you didn't have anything to eat for two and a half days? What do you mean?"

She looked at him for a long, puzzled moment, then drew her hand across her brow.

"Of course," she answered slowly, "you don't know about that. No. How could you?"

He hoped she was going to continue, but instead she raised herself on her elbow and whispered, "Tell me this: what have you done about him?"

"You mean the doctor? Nothing. He's in his room, now, asleep, I suppose. It's about 3 o'clock, you know."

"Do you mean you haven't arrested him—after what I told you? Then he was outside that door! I knew it!"

He caught her hands in a reassuring grasp.

"No, no, my dear, you mustn't be frightened. Don't you understand, it's impossible to arrest the man—without a reason."

"But I told you! Didn't you hear what I said. He's a murderer! He was murdering your father, and he was going to kill you, too. If I hadn't found out and got here in time! O, aren't people stupid! I thought I'd made it clear!"

She tore her hands from his hold and covered her face for an instant, crying, "O, why couldn't you have him arrested at once, both of them, for that matter? I can't understand! Why didn't you?"

There was no evading the sharpness of her question. He dropped his eyes in embarrassment, unable to reply.

"O!" she burst out, as though the truth had suddenly dawned on her, "now I know! I see it all! You thought I didn't know what I was saying. You thought I was raving, the doctor made you believe it, he would, he's always prepared for any emergency, even though he never dreamed I should get away!"

"Get away? What do you mean by that, Esther?"

Instead of replying, she lifted his right hand and examined it with feverish interest.

"Are you absolutely sure he didn't touch this place in any way. You didn't let him put anything on it?"

"No, no, nothing at all!"

"Thank God! I began to be afraid I didn't save you after all," she breathed, and laughed a little hysterically. "O, Roger, I shall dream for years of that terrible time I had trying to reach you! I honestly thought I should die on the way."

"Esther," he said, "forcing himself to speak, 'where were you during those two days and nights? What do you mean by a terrible time trying to reach me?'"

Her face contracted with a spasm of pain, as though the memory were unbearable. He pressed her hand, quick to spare her, and afraid, too, that he might do her an injury.

"It doesn't in the least matter, don't tell me now."

She lay silent another moment, then announced slowly:

"No. . . . I will tell you. It won't hurt me now. You see, I have been kept a prisoner. . . . unconscious. . . . in the doctor's laboratory, you know, at the top of his house. . . . in the Route de Grasse."

"A prisoner!"

For the life of him he could not repress the utter incredulity he felt at this astounding statement.

"I don't think you believe," she said, smiling the ghost of a smile. "I know it sounds impossible, but it's true. He never meant for me to leave there alive. He was going to do away with me so as to leave no trace."

Suddenly he knew that she was speaking the truth.

"Esther—do you know what you're saying?"

Cold horror gripped him.

"A population of 500,000 by 1932" is Atlanta's slogan. Let's all pull together for a Greater Atlanta.

The Constitution's Weekly Business Review

EDITED BY M. D. GLEASON

There is hardly a need or a want that cannot be filled in Atlanta's stores and factories.

Atlanta Recognized Center For Quality Production

Not so many years ago, if you lived in Atlanta and wanted to buy some manufactured article the dealer did not have in stock, he would order it for you from the factory and you could get it in a few days. But times are changing and there are dozens of things made here in Atlanta at present that were not made here 20 or 25 years ago. Now, if you want many of these same things, they are not in stock, the firm will have them made up for you at once. Thus, if it is deemed advisable, the article in question can be made in accordance with the customer's individual requirements. Especially does this apply to tents.

and awnings, for Atlanta has been steadily forging ahead in the canvas goods lines the past few years and now ranks as one of the most important centers in the country in these lines, for due to the fact that this busy city of the south is located amidst the fields of production and surrounded by manufacturers of the best in quality canvas and duck goods, the use in canvas goods can be bought in Atlanta at the most reasonable prices.

The circus, show, carnival, gospel tents, contractors and tourists tents made here in the City of the South carry the names of Atlanta and the local makers to all parts of the world and thousands of people see the mute Atlanta banners giving testimony that Atlanta is a good place to buy tents.

One of these firms located here is the M. D. Smith Tent and Awning company, which has the distinction of being the oldest firm of its kind south of the Mason and Dixon line and at the same time the largest tent and awning business in the South. Last week a very large tent was shipped to San Bernardino, Calif. A week before that another large one went to Seattle, Wash., and just previous to that, one went to a small town in western Massachusetts. A big contractor's tent was sent to Texas and during the fall more tents will be shipped to various parts of the country.

In the awning business this firm has a large force of expert workmen for several years and quality goods and good workmanship has always been their customer's guarantee that awnings bought of them will add good looks to the building and give satisfactory comfort to the owner.

Local Rabbit Breeders Plan Big Show This Year at Fair

The Atlanta Rabbit and Cavy club has just completed arrangements with the Southeastern Fair association to stage the greatest rabbit and guinea pig show ever held in the southern states at the big fair this fall.

This Atlanta club is a member of the Georgia-Florida club as well as the National Association of Rabbit Breeders of America. The membership here is composed of some of the most expert rabbit men in the nation and they have started early to make preparations to hold a show here that will be well worth coming many miles to see.

"The fair management is cooperating with the local club in the matter and will offer the largest number of money prizes that have ever been offered at any rabbit show anywhere in this country," Oscar Mills, executive secretary of the association stated. "We are planning to raise the money for the fair and the agricultural department of the government is mailing out to all who are interested some very instructive and highly interesting literature encouraging the raising of more rabbits in this country."

The rabbit show as projected by the Atlanta Rabbit and Cavy club, continued Mr. Mills, "will be of great educational value to all those interested, for these men are going at this in a business-like way. In addition to showing hundreds of the nation's best breeds, the club will have one of the largest restaurants on the grounds near the rabbit exhibit, where they will serve domestic rabbits in many ways."

"We are listing in our premium catalog 18 of the better breeds of rabbits and premiums at this show, and these catalogs will be mailed free of charge to those who will consider making an exhibit. We have secured some of the best and most competent rabbit judges in this country to judge at this show and nothing will be left undone to make it a great show."

The committee of ten members of the Atlanta Rabbit club in charge will also have a great rabbit fair exhibit beginning with the common rabbit and then finishing up with the beautiful angora and cavy coats. Experts will show the great opportunities offered in raising the best breeds of rabbits for their furs.

The Atlanta Rabbit and Cavy club meets every second Monday night at the Ansley hotel and as tonight is one of the meeting nights every man, woman, girl or boy interested in raising rabbits for pets or commercial purposes is cordially invited to be present. The desk clerk will direct all visitors to the club meeting place. Officials and members of the club are working to encourage Georgia people to raise more rabbits for their money values. If considerable interest is manifested in the matter this year, the federal government will be asked to establish and maintain a government experiment and educational station somewhere in Georgia, similar to those in southern California.

CLEANING COMPANY, LITTLE GEORGIA GIVES EFFICIENT, PEANUT BECOMING SPEEDY SERVICE FACTOR IN INDUSTRY

Spring, Easter and grand opera all mean clean-up time in the mind of the average Atlanta householder and building owner and the several cleaning companies of Atlanta have been busy during the past few weeks.

Probably one of the busiest lately is the Empire Window Cleaning company, 24 1-2 Peachtree street, which is composed of several men who have had 10 or 11 years' experience in this line of work. While this company cleans everything of hard surface it is especially interested in rendering service to the housewife preparing for company, and it will send fast service trucks and an experienced crew of house or window cleaners to any address in Atlanta on short notice.

When the cleaning of any house or building is done by an experienced and properly-equipped crew, the work is done properly and speedily. This firm works under the workmen's compensation act and all its workmen are protected in case of accident while in discharge of their duties. The firm itself guarantees its customers against property or employee loss due to any accident.

Due to the central location of the offices of this firm at Five Points, it is easily accessible to all and a call to IVy 4496 will bring further information. EARLY VEGETABLES BRING LARGE SUMS TO STATE GROWERS

Georgia's asparagus crop in south Georgia, which is expected to move during the present month, is expected to exceed that of last year by at least 50 per cent, according to reports received in Atlanta by the agricultural department of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Coast railroad. Last year the crop was sold for $451,000. In 1927 there were 4,000 acres cultivated in Georgia and the yield was 188,000 bushels, worth $4 per bushel. The crop was sold for $451,000. Grady county has come to the front as a producer and shipper of collards, a succulent vegetable, more or less skin to the cabbage plant. Records of shipments during the last three weeks from Cairo show that 100,000 pounds have gone to various markets of the southeast.

Grady county normally has a large acreage planted in collards, but usually they are allowed to produce seed, since practically all the nation's supply of collard seed is produced there. The first carload of lettuce from the Hamilton plantation at St. Simon Island, property of Eugene Lewis, of Detroit, Mich., has been shipped to eastern markets. A. B. and C. agents said, "About 75 carloads of lettuce will be shipped during the season, reports state. 'Rich in Jodine' is the label that will appear on all crates of vegetables going from this plantation, it was announced."

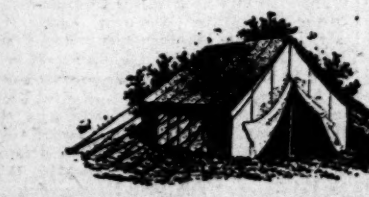

TWO ARE KILLED WHEN PASSENGER HITS MOTOR CAR

Pryor, Okla., April 8.—(P)—Two persons were killed, another is believed to be dying and a fourth was seriously injured when the "Blue Bonnet," Missouri-Kansas-Texas fast passenger train, crashed into the rear of a motor car on the main street of Pryor here.

Leslie Jackson, 22, was killed instantly in the crash and Miss Beulah Chandler, 19, lived only a few minutes after the accident. Mildred Carter, 15, is in a hospital here with injuries, which physicians say, probably will be fatal, and Richard Lindley, driver of the motor car, is suffering from serious bruises and burns.

NEW TIRE STORE WILL COOPERATE WITH CAR OWNERS

A visit to the Consolidated Tire Stores, Inc., 155 Spring street, S. W., corner of James street, last week brought us on ground familiar to the older residents of Atlanta as the site of the subject of Henry Grady's famous story, "The Patch Work House."

But there is a great difference between the two buildings that were raised on the same lot. The "Patch Work House" was a poor squatter's effort to make a shelter for himself and aged mother out of old boards and burlap sacks. The beautiful building that now stands on the same lot houses one of the nicest tire stores in the city.

The Consolidated Tire company sells the celebrated Goodyear tires on the club buying or divided payment plan, and the customer here has the assurance that he gets the same grade of tires whether he pays cash or installment.

The president and manager, C. C. Mason, says "we are here to sell the best tires made at the most convenient terms to responsible people. Good business is what we are after and our

COMFORTABLE BED MAY BE SECURED FOR LITTLE COST

If a boarding house keeper or a hostess shows a guest to a room, the principal object of attention of both parties is the bed and the bed looks comfortable the guest expresses pleasure at the room.

But a fine-looking made-up bed may not always be a comfortable bed, for after all the mattress is the main thing about a bed and if it is soft and downy a good night's sleep may be enjoyed, but if the mattress is hard and lumpy the guest does not get a restful sleep and soon finds excuses to go elsewhere.

The scarcity of money, at times in the average household does not always permit the family to go to the expense of buying a high priced mattress and the old lumpy or soiled mattress is retained in service some times years longer than it should have been.

If the housewife, who has several old mattresses that are uncomfortable to sleep on, would just take time enough to phone the Dixie Mattress company at IVy 0605 and get their prices and assurance that they will make her old mattress over again so that it will be as comfortable and look like new for a small cost, then the housewife will be more than pleased at the information obtained.

The Dixie Mattress company does their work in a way that pleases their customers so well that they tell their neighbors all about it and a great part of their trade is secured in this way and a satisfied customer is a big asset in the mattress business.

Due to the splendid equipment of this firm and the many experienced people connected with it, but a few hours is required by them from the time the old mattress is called for until the delivery of the new seemingly new mattress and the folks that have them renovate their mattresses this way will be more than pleased that they did not have them do the work long before this.

Bone in Throat. A fishbone Sunday caused Police Officer C. W. Crankshaw, 30, of 420 De Soto avenue, to make a special trip to Grady hospital, where it was removed successfully from his throat.

MORAVIAN EASTER PICTURESQUE DAY

Winston-Salem, N. C., April 8. —(F) The thousands of persons who participated in the sunrise Moravian Easter exercises here today heard distinctly the reading of the ancient Latin prayer, "The Lord is risen," by Bishop Ronthaler by reason of amplifiers which were used for the first time in the annual ceremony.

At the first flush of dawn broke, Bishop Ronthaler appeared on the stone steps of the plain light brick church in Old Salem and proclaimed "The Lord is risen." Dr. Ronthaler's voice echoed in the air above the rows of the audience, but the amplifiers picked it up and carried it clearly to the vast assemblage. Back from them came the response, "The Lord is risen indeed."

Then, in rich and majestic melody came the strains of an Easter anthem from the United Moravian band, a musical organization of 300 pieces.

Bishop Ronthaler read the litany just as he had read it 15 times before. In 1772 in that year the Easter sunrise service was instituted by a small group of Moravians who were gathered about the grave of John Burkholder, one of the founders of this community, who died the year before.

Men, women and children, many of them from a distance, braved a cold wind to see a service which is believed to be the beauty and impressiveness of which has made it an annual mecca for visitors from many states in the
